THE BLACK DUCK. - By Paul Terry.

Milton Mouse takes his ducks to the pond for their daily swim. His Black Duck annoys him so much that Milt ties the pest to a tree to keep him out of mischief.

Waffles, a cat's paw for mean Woofus Wolf, sees Milt and his flock and tells Woofus of the scene. Waffles makes friends with Milt and after he has Milt interested in a book of Bathing Beauties, sends out a decoy duck. The ducks seeing the decoy (which is manned by a mouse) chase after him into the barnyard. There the wolf grabs one of the ducks and starts to carve it.

The Black Duck hears the cries for help, slips the string off his neck, runs to tell Milt and carries the mouse to the butchering scene.

Milt crosses swords with Woofus and, after a fierce duel, conquors the villian.

Letting the ducks out of the barnyard Milt rides ahead on the back of the Black Duck.
